UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL GALWAY, IRELAND

Client: Celtic
Communications Ltd

Project requirements

Opened in 1956, University Hospital Galway is the main acute hospital in Galway, Ireland and had undergone a major redevelopment programme.

Celtic Communications Ltd, the contractor, required a state-of-the-art call system which could be installed into the hospital - this system needed to be reliable, simple to operate and integrated into bedhead lighting.

The system had to be installed with minimal disruption to operational activity in the hospital.

Solutions

Safety Systems Distribution provided an Intercall 600 non - speech addressable call system to Celtic Communications Ltd, which successfully replaced the hospital's old system, which had become costly to maintain.

The new system - one of the most advanced on the market - featured a call point, with levels for Call (a standard patient call), Assist (staff needing assistance), Emergency (staff requiring urgent assistance), Presence (a member of staff being in the room) and Visit (a member of staff has accepted the call and is on their way to a patient), plus a handset with call and on/off light control, a display panel (fitted wherever calls are to be shown and the alarm is to sound) and an IP power supply unit with call logging function.
